Who Will Bear Democracy's Banner Against Speaker Boyer.

POSTMASTER LARKIN WON'T RUN. Congressman Scott the Pewer Behind

RIGLER IS THE MAN

Possible Throne. THE PLATFORM TO BE ON NEW ISSUES

As the Democratic State Convention will be held at Harrisburg, September 4, a DIS-PATCH reporter sought Postmaster Larkin yesterday, to ascertain the exact condition of the boom which is said to exist in the interest of that gentleman's candidacy for the State Treasurership. Postmaster Larkin said he was not a candidate, and that word has recently been passed along the line that E. A. Bigler, late Collector of Internal Revenue in this district, had been selected as the standard bearer of the Democratic party in the fall campaign.

"Congressman Scott being in one sense ex-Collector Bigler's political sponsor, this will be nominated." "Who is talked of for State Chairman Mr. Larkin?" "Well, now," said the Postmaster, goodhumoredly, "I am not in politics. My time is wholly occupied by business, and I can-am simply saying what I hear in regard to Mr. Bigler." ON THE SAME AUTHORITY E. P. Kissner, of Cumberland county, is talked of as his own successor in the chairmanship. "I have no personal aspirations, and may fairly be classed as a Bigler man, as I favor his nomination for many reasons.

As to whys and wherefores, you must excuse me from being quoted." Another prominent Democrat, who withholds his name from print, talked more freely of the situation, as follows: "It will be in one sense a Scott convention; but Mr. Randall's friends will have the best of treatment. I have it from a place not a thousand miles from Erie that Bigler's nomination is assured. By common consent the position comes to the West. Hon. Sam. M. Wherry, the minority leader in the last House, has a number of friends who are urging his candidacy; but he made some stiff prohibition speeches in the last campaign and is out of the running. He will undoubtedly draw up the platformhowever. There is no doubt that the dele, gates from the West will be committed to Bigler; but no one knows what the Pitts-burg delegates will do. They are an unknown quantity. A warm friendship exists between Chairman Kissner and Mr. Bigler, and the way seems clear for the latter.

This is going to be a campaign for blood, for the Democratic party icels that it has more than a show of success. Beasons? Well, there are several. In the first place the unanimity at the late Republican Convention was ENTIRELY TOO UNANIMOUS. so to speak. Pennsylvania peeple have more than once rebelled at machine-made nominations. The Republican platform attitude on this subject he will be given the task of framing the platform. There will be a ringing reference to the financial ad-ministration of State funds, and an allusion to the negative vote on the motion to investigate. It will be a new issue presented to the people of the Commonwealth. The candidate will make a strong fight upon a platform containing something more than platitudes and indorsements.

As one of the board, his absence will be especially felt. A modest, kindly, courteous manner in social intercourse, excellent judgtudes and indorsements.
"Concerning the tariff, the convention will probably reaffirm the national platform of last year. It is the Democratic sentiment everywhere in the State, and grows stronger every day. The formation of trusts, the general condition of the laber market, all contributed to strengthen the Democratic party's position upon the tariff question. Those who have been flattering themselves that Congressman Scott is out of politics are slightly behind the procession. He will be felt in the coming campaign."

Mr. Samuel Dawson was a member of Company F, Ohio Volunteer Infantry, and became blind in his right eve about the close of the war. Two years ago he lost the sight of the left eye.

The Wellsville Journal says: "Mr. Pearson, of this place, accompanied Mr. Dawson to Pittsburg, where he saw Dr. Sadler, the oculist, 804 Penn avenue, remove a cataract from Mr. Dawson's right eye. He brought the cataract home with him, and exhibited it to the Journal force. The operation was but the work of a moment, and painless. In an hour he could see small objects, a thing he had not done for years." Since the above Mr. Dawson has secured cataract glasses and
